Description

Something Very Very different and yet totally familiar. This is a typical English Country Villa circa 1890 but in Spain. It was built to house British Mining engineers who were here to supervise local Silver Mines. The main house is in need of modernisation but basically is sound and habitable and would provide great country living, in fact a complete mini Country estate. In addition to the Main house there are two other buildings included in the price. A small cottage of some 60 sq mtrs which would provide super guest accomodation and a Barn of some 80 sq mtrs which could also be easily converted or used as stables. The whole comes with a parcel of land some 7500 sq mtrs (approx 1 1/2 acres) set in a very pleasant Valley with wooded hills rising at the rear.
